Austin, Texas, gets plenty of shine as the “it” place for its vibrant live music scene and revelatory barbecue. The magnetic draw of the city’s distinctive music and food is how I moved close by. But when I need a respite from the bustle, I know Dripping Springs, a.k.a. “The Gateway to Hill Country,” is merely 40 minutes away. My most recent Dripping Springs escape plan involved a stay at the luxury resort Camp Lucy.

I could feel the stress leaving my body as I exited Austin’s city limits and soaked in the serene surroundings leading to Camp Lucy’s sprawling off-the-grid location. As I drove over glittering rivers and streams and onto winding, narrow country roads, my Google Maps decided to go offline. Fortunately, the rustic sign pointing to Camp Lucy’s hilltop entrance appeared in the knick this way. Camp Lucy was initially established as an outdoor wedding venue before being converted into a unique luxury getaway by owners Kim and Whit Hanks in 2010. Camp Lucy now has 27 boutique hotel rooms, two standalone family cottages, fun daily guest activities (such as archery, mixology classes, olive oil tastings, hatchet throwing, and fishing), a resort-style pool with a swim-up bar, and Tillie's restaurant.

structures housing Ian's Chapel and Tillie's. The spa will feature additional overnight accommodations, a bathhouse, a sauna, an outdoor pool overlooking Hill Country, and a meditation building.

From enjoying a glass of Camp Lucy Vineyards malbec on the balcony of my Treetop Room to channeling my inner Katniss Everdeen in an archery class, I cherished my relaxing, whimsical stay at Camp Lucy.

Read on for my review of Camp Lucy, a sequestered gem in the heart of the Texas Hill Country.

WHAT WE LIKE

There's something for everyone at this hillcountry escape, with curated activities and events and a farm area with alpacas and chickens.

Camp Lucy has an on-site vineyard serving wine made on the premise, and a lovely restaurant, Tillie's, which uses fresh ingredients from local farms and ranches.

The resort is filled with one-of-a-kind trinkets from the owners' travels around the world.

I stayed in one of Camp Lucy's deluxe Treetop Rooms, nestled in an oak tree with a private balcony overlooking the rolling hills. In the mornings, I would catch stares from the curious neighbors, a family of deer. Asian-inspired décor, like vintage tapestries and chic, retro wallpaper, greeted me, along with patterned pendant lamps dangling from the high ceilings. The Estate Rooms have exquisite, handcrafted imported stone soaking tubs. The two standalone family cottages (Creekside Cottage and Lucy's Cottage) can house up to 10 guests and are equipped with full-size kitchens, fireplaces, and multiple bedrooms. The English Suite has an outdoor rain shower, while the Terrace Suite offers two private patios outfitted with outdoor seating and a plush, pillow-top hammock.

Camp Lucy's on-site restaurant Tillie's is inside a repurposed 18th-century town hall from Ninh Binh, Vietnam. The seasonal menu showcases ingredients sourced from local farms and ranches, resulting in international-inspired plates and cocktails with a Texas touch.

My favorite bite from the weekend was their tender beef short rib drizzled with a smoky-sweet glaze, complemented with smoked marble potatoes. The bold cocktail menu features a lineup of Texas-based spirits, including Treaty Oak Day Drinker Texas Bourbon and Nine Banded Straight Bourbon Whiskey. My favorite drink on the menu was the Smoked Old Fashioned, made with Nine Banded Bourbon, Angostura bitters, sugar, and orange, accompanied by a smoke-filled bottle to cloak the cocktail when it was

Upon check-in, I was greeted with a complimentary glass of wine from their vineyard – which was fresh news to me. I was distracted from hearing the daily activity options explained as I went between making eye contact with the receptionist and the towering, glass-shielded wine cellar behind her. Although I knew Dripping Springs is part of the Texas Wine Country, I didn't realize Camp Lucy had their own award-winning wine line-up in partnership with Comfort, Texas-based Bending Branch Winery. Since its 2017 vintage, Bending Branch has crafted wines using grapes sourced from the five-acre Camp Lucy Vineyards (which you can tour while visiting the resort). So, when I wasn't feeding the resident alpacas (front desk staff provides the appropriate food) or hatchet-throwing, I enjoyed sitting on my room's balcony with a glass of Camp Lucy Vineyard wine, specifically their juicy,
